BURNABY, BC: International Water-Guard Industries Inc. (IWG) delivered its first IWG-A6 water treatment unit to Gulfstream Aerospace.

The IWG-A6 is a potable water treatment unit to be installed in the Gulfstream G650 project. The 10-lb. unit has a flow rate of up to four US gallons per minute and combines ultraviolet disinfection with a replaceable filter to produce clean, pure water from onboard supplies. A single NPS-A6 can provide basic water treatment for an entire Boeing 737 or Airbus A320.

"Our team is pleased and proud to have its equipment standard on this ultra-long range and very high speed business jet," said IWG President & Chief Executive Officer David C. Fox.

The IWG-A6 incorporates a new modular design, allowing many water system product configurations to be developed from common building blocks. It also has the enhanced self-monitoring capability available in IWG's latest water treatment units.

While ensuring that necessary ultraviolet light is produced to disinfect the aircraft's water supply, its self-monitoring system also scans for a range of fault conditions which are reported to a cabin management system through industry standard data protocols.

International Water-Guard is a Burnaby, BC-based aerospace company focusing on aircraft potable water treatment and full water system solutions.
