IWG delivers first IWG-A6 water treatment units to Gulfstream Aerospace

International Water-Guard Industries Inc (IWG) has delivered its first IWG-A6 water treatment units to Gulfstream Aerospace. "The first all-new IWG-A6s will go to the all-new Gulfstream G650 project. Our team is pleased and proud to have its equipment standard on this ultra-long range and very high speed business jet," said David C. Fox, president and chief executive officer of IWG.

The IWG-A6 incorporates a new modular design, allowing many water system product configurations to be developed from common building blocks. It also has the enhanced self-monitoring capability available in IWG's latest water treatment units. While ensuring that necessary ultraviolet light is produced to disinfect the aircraft's water supply, its self-monitoring system also scans for a range of fault conditions, which can be reported to a cabin management system through industry-standard data protocols.
